

Marv Wastle is a retired hydro worker who grew up in the city of Toronto. Upon retiring he decided to move north and purchased a home outside the town of Emsdale, Ontario. With the long northern winters ahead of him, Marv decided he needed a hobby and signed up for some art classes. After taking some courses in watercolours, acrylics and mixed medias, he then discovered a new media, alcohol ink. It was a new product of strange properties and vibrant colours, just what he was looking for. Marv continues to work with alcohol ink and still remains enthused about creating new pieces of abstract art and is keen to share this new art form. Marv will be offering his workshop on Wednesday March 16, from 9:30 to 12:30 and is part of a workshop package with the Watercolour with Wool Workshop in the afternoon at the Signal North Gallery.
